

JEE Main 2027

Notification Guide — What to Expect

The National Testing Agency (NTA) has not yet released the official JEE Main 2027 notification. This guide summarizes what the notification is expected to contain, based on the pattern NTA has followed in recent years, so you know exactly what to look out for and where to check once it drops. This is an unofficial guide prepared by freemock.in — always cross-check with jeemain.nta.nic.in once the real notification is out.

What the notification typically announces

- Exam dates for Session 1 and Session 2, and the registration window for each
- Eligibility criteria for the admission year (Class 12 passing years accepted)
- Application fee by category and by paper combination
- List of exam cities and any new centres added that year
- Any changes to exam pattern, number of questions, or marking scheme
- The official information bulletin (a detailed PDF covering every rule)

Where NTA usually publishes it

- jeemain.nta.nic.in — the only official source; treat any other site's "notification PDF" as unverified until cross-checked here
- NTA's official social media handles, for the announcement itself
- Major news outlets, once NTA confirms the date

Typical release timeline (based on past years)

- Session 1 notification: usually released in October–November of the preceding year
- Session 1 registration: opens within days of the notification
- Session 1 exam: held in January
- Session 2 notification/registration: typically opens in January–February
- Session 2 exam: held in April
- These windows shift by a few weeks year to year — always confirm against the live NTA notice once published.

What you can do right now, before the notification is out

- Keep your Class 12 board details, category certificate, and photo/signature ready in the specified format
- Start or continue syllabus revision using the previous year's syllabus as a guide
- Take regular mock tests to build speed and accuracy
- Bookmark jeemain.nta.nic.in and check it periodically from October 2026 onward

freemock.in will update this guide and publish fresh mock tests the moment the official JEE Main 2027 notification is released. Visit freemock.in for more free practice papers and exam updates.
